The due date for the entire filing of income tax returns has already been extended from 31 July and 31 October to 30 November, while the tax return date in connection with the tax audit has been extended until 31 October from 30 September. Previously, the Ministry of Finance had extended the date for various investments/deposits/payments for applying for the deduction under Chapter VIA-B of the Income Tax Act, which includes Section 80C (LIC, PPF, NSC, etc.), 80D (Mediclip), 80G (donations) etc. from 31 March. This means that investments/deposits/payments can be made by 30 June to apply for the deduction under these sections for FY20. According to Amarpal Chadha, Tax Partner & India Mobility Leader at EY India, the CBDT has taken steps to report income tax returns for the 2019-20 tax year after extending the deadline for filing tax returns until 30 November 2020. To give relief due to the Covid, CBDT allows the use of investments in the period April 2020 to June 2020 against income from the 2019-20 tax year. There was some doubt about the modality of claiming deduction for such investments. The notified forms provide for a necessary mechanism to claim such deductions. Make. The new forms will be able to make budget changes in 2019 such as deduction for interest on affordable home loans/purchase of electric vehicles, interchangeability of PAN and Aadhaar, reporting of certain high spending, etc., he said. It is possible to submit Form 67 before submitting the return. The question is whether the form can be submitted after the return of income has been submitted. While the requirement is procedural, a tax return can be considered incomplete if the form is not filed along with the tax returns and an official can refuse foreign tax credits. However, if you submit Form 67 before completion of the assessment or even with an application 154 after completion of the assessment, this cannot be disputed if the facts have already been disclosed in the return and the form itself only completes one process. However, in order to avoid adventures with the department and unwanted litigation, it is always advisable to submit the form with the return of income so that it is not missed or forgotten. The PPF contribution and the LIC premium paid are listed in Section 80C deductions (Via deduction) in ITR. However, the total limit below 80C is 1.5L. (I that you were referring to investments made - pp/LIC and not to disbursements (income) from the same). Relation. You can request a transcript online at Get Transcript.
