Over to Pop Invites from Frog Prince Paperie Just because the expected baby is not the first, does not mean that the newborn should not receive a special welcome in the world. It can be hard to word these second-time-around showers. If a parent usually puts so much attention on the firstborn, they may worry that friends and family members may tire of baby announcements. Help expectant parents celebrate with a baby shower for a second or next child. Each child is special, unique and deserves his own period of recognition. When a parent celebrates the birth of a child, and it's not their firstborn, sometimes these showers are called second time-around showers. Alternatively, they can be called sprinkle showers because instead of the usual items given to showers that help first-time parents set up the new nursery, sprinkle showers are for sprinkling good wishes, along with those little useful items that every baby needs, whether it's the first or sixth arrival with the family. We can all use a little well-wishes as a family continues to grow and expand. On these invitations, you want to include all the information your invitees need to know about the party to decide whether or not to participate and how to receive RSVP in the invitation. Many of these details are expected for most event invitations, but some things like an answer card are not typical for baby showers. Many people may even opt for a more casual setting and style of shower for their second born. Often all commotion is not necessary, and the mother just wants to celebrate her next child with her nearest and dearest. These details will include: Guest of honor Time the shower starts Time the shower will end Replace with address and directions, or GPS address if different from the mailing address. How to RSVP (unless this is formal invitations and you've included an answer card, something that's not typical for a baby shower); RSVP information may include a home phone number, mobile phone number, email address. The theme of the shower, if it applies Invitation etiquette is crucial if you are planning to host some upcoming events. As a host, you need to learn to manage the responsibilities that come with coordinating the event with ease under pressure. After some you will of course and share event planning advice with friends who will ask you how you got it all done.
